In the final moments of Monday's trade deadline, they picked up some offensive depth, adding veteran winger Marcus Johansson to their ranks ahead of a postseason push. For more, head to page 8.

METRO BOSTONR. Kelly pleads not guilty to sexually assaulting teens

1 Grammy-winning R&B star R. Kelly pleaded not guilty on Monday to charges that he sexually assaulted three teenage girls and a woman in alleged incidents dating back to 1998, weeks after a television documentary leveled new accusations against him. Kelly, 52, was charged under a 10-count indictment with sexually assaulting three teenagers, with each count carrying a maximum of 10 years in prison. Dressed in an orange jail jumpsuit, Kelly appeared in a Chicago courtroom before Cook County Associate Judge Lawrence Flood and spoke only to confirm his name. His lawyer, Steven Greenberg, entered a not guilty plea on Kelly's behalf. Prosecutors say the victims include a teenager Kelly met when she sought an autograph during his previous trial on child pornography charges, another he met at her 16th-birthday party and his hairdresser, who was then 24.

Oscars US audience larger after record-low 2018

2 The U.S. television audience for the first hostless Academy Awards broadcast in 30 years was roughly 12 percent bigger than last year's record-low crowd of viewers, Walt Disney Co.'s ABC said on Monday. Even with the rebound from 2018 the Sunday telecast was the second-smallest ever for the Oscars, drawing in an average audience of 29.6 million total viewers, Nielsen data in an ABC statement showed. Awards shows remain one of the few must-see live events and their ratings are closely watched by advertisers as streaming shows, movies and other content compete for watchers' attention. Though dwarfed by the Super Bowl, the Oscars are often one of America's most-watched non-sporting events. The Nielsen data for the Oscars does not include viewing of the Oscars on digital and mobile platforms.

Jon Stewart joins senators for 9/11 funding

name in rebranding effort

4 Bank of America Corp. is dropping the "Merrill Lynch" name from some of its businesses, phasing out a brand with a long history on Wall Street as part of a multiyear marketing effort, the lender said on Monday. The investment bank and capital markets business is ditching the 104-year-old name to become BofA Securities and its wealth management businesses will collectively be called Merrill, without the "Lynch." The individual units Merrill Lynch Wealth Management, Merrill Edge and Merrill Guided Investing will keep their names. U.S. Trust, Bank of America's private bank which caters to ultra-high-net-worth clients, will become Bank of America Private Bank, and Merrill Lynch Private Banking & Investment Group will become Merrill Private Wealth Management, dropping the "Lynch." In the past, rebranding has faced some opposition.

Russian TV lists US nuke
targets after Putin warning

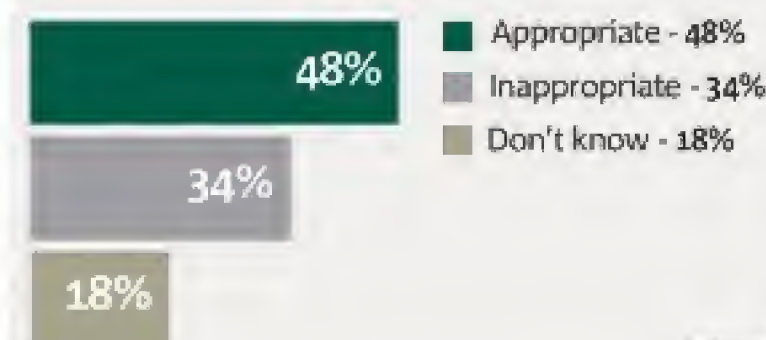

5 Russian state television has listed U.S. military facilities that Moscow would target in the event of a nuclear strike, and said that a hypersonic missile Russia is developing would be able to hit them in fewer than five minutes. The targets included the Pentagon and the presidential retreat in Camp David, Maryland. The report, unusual even by the sometimes bellicose standards of Russian state TV, was broadcast on Sunday evening, days after President Vladimir Putin said Moscow was militarily ready for a "Cuban Missile"-style crisis if the United States wanted one. With tensions rising over Russian fears that the United States might deploy intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe as a Cold War-era arms-control treaty unravels, Putin has said Russia would be forced to respond by placing hypersonic nuclear missiles on submarines near U.S. waters.

Another Bay State billionaire busted in Florida prostitution sting

"They weren't going in there for massages," said the Vero Beach police chief.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

A Greater Boston-based billionaire joined a list of wicked wealthy figures who allegedly had frequented the same Florida massage parlor where New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft is said to have solicited prostitutes.

J.W. Childs Associates founder John Childs, 77, is wanted for solicitation of prostitution charges in connection to an international human trafficking ring, which police reportedly had under surveillance for several months. Authorities in Vero Beach, Florida, set his bond at $1,000.

He had not been arrested as of Monday morning, according to the New York Post.

Childs is a resident of Indian Shores River, Florida, and is a prominent donor to many Republican politicians and political action committees, including former U.S. Speaker of the House Paul Ryan and Mitt Romney's 2012 presidential campaign, according to TCPalm.com.

According to the Waltham equity firm's website, J.W. Childs Associates has invested about $3.7 billion in about 50 businesses since 1995, including Meow Mix, SunnyD and MattressFirm.

"The accusation of solicitation of prostitution is totally false."

John Childs

Robert Kraft, 77, was charged with two misdemeanor counts of soliciting prostitution on Friday by police in Jupiter, Florida. Reports indicate that Kraft visited Orchids of Asia Day Spa twice between Jan. 18 and Jan. 22 and was reportedly caught on video performing sex acts with female workers used by Chinese human traffickers.

Kraft and Childs are two of about 170 suspects charged amid a wide sweep of multiple massage parlors allegedly connected to prostitution and human trafficking following a six-month police investigation.

"I'll tell you folks, there were very little massages actually going on," Vero Beach Police Chief David Currey said in a press conference broadcast on the Florida Police Department's Facebook page.

"They weren't going in there for massages."

The multijurisdictional international sex trafficking investigation netted several other Bay State residents, according to the Waltham Patch, including Kevin Coyne, 40, of Boston; Timothy McCoy, 55, of Boston; Robert Ohlson, 67, of Athol; and Carl Santheson, 52, of Plymouth.

"The accusation of solicitation of prostitution is totally false," Childs told Bloomberg News.

"I have retained a lawyer. I have received no contact by the police department about this charge."

Salem marijuana shop hits snag with recreational sales

Alternative Therapies Group in Salem, the third recreational dispensary to open in Massachusetts, announced last week that it was temporarily out of stock, and would only service card-carrying medical marijuana patients for the time being. Even those who had already scheduled appointments for a recreational marijuana sale were out of luck.

It's the first time any of the state's recreational dispensaries have halted retail sales since opening late last year. So what happened?

It revolves around METRC, a seed-to-sale tracking system first developed for Colorado's legalization of recreational marijuana in 2013, which has since been adopted by a number of states regulating their emerging legal marijuana markets. The state's Cannabis Control Commission requires all dispensaries to use it, and helps stores track plants from the seed stage all the way to the final product that reaches consumers.

According to a blog post on ATG's website, the group said its "inventory data...[became] corrupted in the state's seed-to-sale tracking system, METRC. This is preventing us from transferring recreational inventory from our cultivation and product manufacturing facility (or from third-party vendors) into the Salem dispensary. The METRC support team and the Cannabis Control Commission have been working hard to correct the problem, but it is a time-consuming and complex process."

But the chairman of the state's cannabis commission, Steven Hoffman, was dismissive of that explanation.

"It's not a physical inventory issue. It's literally a recording issue, and it's a data-entry issue," Hoffman told reporters after a commission meeting, according to the Boston Globe. "I'm not going to get into who said what to whom, but the data was not entered correctly. I think it is easily fixable...this is not a METRC issue... [it's] working, in our opinion, exactly the way it should."

Recreational marijuana customers in Salem will have to look elsewhere to make purchases. GETTY IMAGES

This may seem like a minor flub, but without an accurate inventory count, the dispensary would be legally barred from moving any plants from its cultivation center to the store itself.

Without more details — both parties declined further comment on these matters in other outlets — it's not clear what exactly happened at ATG. Confirmed METRC glitches have caused headaches in the past for dispensaries in other states, including Maryland, Washington and Pennsylvania, though human error has also been a factor in closures outside of Massachusetts, too.

When will it open again?

It's not clear when the store will again service recreational customers. "We do not have an expected timeline for the problem to be resolved at the moment," the dispensary website reads, noting they "deeply regret" the closure.

Why is it OK for medical patients to keep going?

Under state regulations, dispensaries must keep a certain amount of product on reserve to ensure medical patients don't experience any lapses in sales — a move championed by medical marijuana advocates in the lead-up to recreational legalization. CHRIS CAESAR

Boston Pops announce Spring 2019 lineup

Jane Lynch will perform with the Pops. GETTY IMAGES

Jane Lynch, Leslie Odom Jr. and more are coming to town.

MOIRA CALLAHAN
letters@metro.us

The Boston Pops have announced their Spring 2019 lineup.

Opening night for conductor Keith Lockhart and the Pops will take place on May 8 with the award-winning Broadway star Bernadette Peters. The evening will also include the local debut of James Beckel's "From the Earth to the Moon and Beyond," a new piece by the acclaimed composer that celebrates the 50th anniversary of the moon landing.

Other highlights include special appearances by comedian Jane Lynch and travel guru Rick Steves. Lynch, best known for her hilarious role as Sue Sylvester on FOX's musical comedy show "Glee," will sing from the Great American Songbook — plus a certain Guatemalan love song made famous by her appearance in "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" — June 11-12. Meanwhile, Steves, the famed American travel writer and television personality, will take audiences on a symphonic journey across Europe June 13-14.

Another exciting addition to the Boston Pops' Spring 2019 lineup is Grammy and MacArthur "Genius Grant" winner Rhiannon Giddens, who's set to perform at Symphony Hall May 22-25. The singer will take part in a four-concert residency focused on American Roots music.

Besides all the talented people performing with the Pops this year, fans can also look forward to the orchestra's first sensory-friendly concert on June 1. This concert is for patrons with autism-spectrum disorders and other disabilities that create sensory sensitivities. These performances are a great way to include those with disabilities who might be uncomfortable in a traditional concert venue.

"Star Wars" fans will get the chance to sit back and enjoy an immersive experience with John Williams' Academy Award-winning score during special film presentations on May 10, 11 and 14. The Pops will screen "Star Wars: A New Hope," while the iconic film's score will be performed live by Lockhart and the orchestra.

Other special appearances include a "Summer of '69" performance featuring Arlo Guthrie (May 15-16), a Nat King Cole tribute by "Hamilton" star Leslie Odom Jr. (June 5-6), the grand return of the Cirque de la Symphonie on June 8, and the annual Gospel Night on June 15. For more info, check out bso.org.

The Bruins acquired Marcus Johansson just minutes before Monday's NHL trade deadline. GETTY IMAGES

Bruins' quiet trade deadline still yields solid moves

The Bruins added Charlie Coyle and Marcus Johansson over the past week leading up to the NHL trade deadline.

RICHARD SLATE
sports@metro.us

While they ended up not making (at least on the surface) the sexier move of trading for Mark Stone from Ottawa or Wayne Simmonds from Philadelphia, the Bruins still were busy right up until Monday afternoon's NHL trade deadline.

Last Wednesday, they flipped Ryan Donato and a conditional fifth-round draft pick (it becomes a fourth-round pick if the B's reach the second round of the playoffs) to the Minnesota Wild for fellow forward and Massachusetts native Charlie Coyle.

In a lesser move on Sunday, the B's signed veteran winger Lee Stempniak (who has been practicing with the team sporadically this season and recently joined the Providence Bruins) and assigned him to Providence. Finally, right as the deadline approached on Monday afternoon, the Bruins traded a second-round pick in 2019 and a fourth-round pick in 2020 to the New Jersey Devils for winger Marcus Johansson, who, like Coyle, is also a former first-round pick. The Devils will retain 40 percent of his salary ($4.75 million) remaining this season.

Johansson (119 goals and 212 assists in 578 games with nine goals and 21 assists in 72 playoff games) is naturally a left winger so he figures to slot in on the second line with David Krejci at center and Jake DeBrusk at right wing.

In his Bruins debut on Saturday (a 2-1 shootout loss at St. Louis), Coyle was the third line center with rookie Peter Cehlarik on the left and David Backes on the right. From my perspective, the Coyle trade is much more notable given the talent that the Bruins had to give up. Donato had been relegated to Providence lately but he has too much talent to be stuck there.

Boston has a brutal recent history of giving up on young goal-scorers too soon (Phil Kessel and Tyler Seguin) and you couldn't help but notice that the Wild have won their first three games with Donato while he's racked up an overtime game-winning goal and three assists already.

The Bruins have been courting Coyle for years and GM Don Sweeney finally got their man. The Weymouth native and former BU star was drafted by San Jose but played his entire NHL career (this is his 7th season) in Minnesota. In 480 games, he's scored 91 goals and added 151 assists. In 44 playoff games, he's had seven goals and eight assists. His versatility (being able to play center or on the wing) along with his strong defensive work should make him a good fit. He has plenty of skill, too, as evidenced by his shootout goal vs. the Blues (he was the only Bruin out of six shooters to score).

"I've been to plenty of Bruins games over the years," noted Coyle. "I just loved that, to take it all in, wishing we were out there with them. I just loved growing up, being there and watching them on TV. It's pretty cool growing up in a hockey city and community. I'm glad to be a part of it now."

Coyle makes his Garden debut as a Bruin on Tuesday (7 p.m. ET, NESN) as they take on the Sharks. Boston had a great Western Conference road trip (4-0-1) that ended over the weekend and that included an insane 6-5 overtime win at San Jose last Monday. If that rematch isn't hard enough, the best team in hockey — Tampa Bay (47-11-4) — comes to town on Thursday (7:30 p.m. ET, NBCSN). Those will be tough tests right away for Johansson and Coyle with their new teammates. Boston is here for the next two weeks as they begin a season-long six-game homestand.

Kyrie Irving and the Celtics need to turn things around quickly. GETTY IMAGES

Celtics looking broken with dangerous Raptors on deck

Out of the All-Star break and into the stretch run of the 2018-19 regular season, the Boston Celtics aren't doing much to ease nerves around the fan base and organization.

The preseason favorites to win the Eastern Conference have experienced their fair share of inconsistencies, injuries, and straight-up drama.

Gordon Hayward has yet to hit his stride after a gruesome injury in his first game as a Celtic last year. It's still unclear whether Kyrie Irving will re-sign with Boston this summer. And the Celtics have looked like a middle-of-the-pack team in the East more times than not.

At 37-23, the Celtics are 8.5 games back of the Eastern Conference-leading Milwaukee Bucks after losing two straight games following their return from the

All-Star break.

After dropping a one-point heartbreaker to those Bucks on Feb. 21, the Celtics were run out of Chicago by the lowly 16-win Bulls in a 126-116 loss over the weekend.

It's just the latest frustration surrounding the Celtics this month. Boston stood pat at the trade deadline while the Bucks, Philadelphia 76ers and Toronto Raptors — all of whom sit ahead of the Celtics in the East — made sizable trades to get better.

After a loss to the Clippers earlier this month, Marcus Morris indicated that something had gone sour in the locker room.

"For me, it's not really about the loss, it's about the attitude that we're playing with," Morris said. "Guys are hanging their heads. It's not fun. We're not competing at a high level.

Even though we're winning, it's still not fun. I don't see the joy in the game. I watch all these other teams around the league, and guys are up on the bench. They're jumping on the court, they're enjoying their teammates' success, they're enjoying everything, they're playing together and they're playing to win. And when I look at us, I just see a bunch of individuals."

There still seem to be some fundamental issues that haven't been fixed over the ensuing weeks.

"Nah, I think we gotta pick [the energy] up. And we know it. Everybody knows it," forward Jaylen Brown said. "We played a tough, hard-nosed game against Milwaukee. We didn't come with the same energy that we had against Milwaukee [against Chicago]. We can't just click it on when the playoffs start."

They'll have to pick things up quickly, though, as Tuesday night provides a daunting matchup against the Raptors, who have won eight of their last 10 games but are coming off an uncharacteristic loss to the Orlando Magic on Sunday.

Toronto sits in second in the East, just two games back of the Bucks, providing the Celtics with an opportunity to remind themselves that they are still very much the team to beat in the conference.

Granted, that idea has never left the mind of Irving, who defiantly stated that Boston will turn it on when it matters most "cause I'm here."

If that's the case, it's time to do so immediately.

- Aries Expand your knowledge and think about the wisest ways to invest your money and time. Look for prospects that will benefit you, not someone else.
- Taurus Refuse to let the drama going on around you slow you down or interfere with your productivity. If you stay focused, you will reap the rewards.
- Gemini Be careful whom you trust. If someone paints a picture and makes a promise that tempts you, make sure you fully understand what you are getting into before you take part.
- Cancer You've got this. Trust and believe in your skills, experience and knowledge to move forward with confidence. Participate in what works for you, not in what someone wants you to do.
- Leo Look around you and consider who your friends are. If someone is trying to tempt you to do something indulgent, be strong and know enough to decline.
- Virgo Think before you say something derogatory. Focus your criticism inward and work on being and doing your best. Make health and fitness priorities.

- Libra Home improvements can be made, but first get the go-ahead from anyone who will be affected by the changes you make. Stay within budget to avoid criticism.
- Scorpio Follow your heart and your dreams. Do things your way and put your energy into revamping your current living situation to suit your personality and lifestyle. Romance is in the stars.
- Sagittarius Emotional confusion will set in if you believe everything you hear. Keep your thoughts and feelings secret, and focus on activities geared toward personal improvements, and a healthier mindset.
- Capricorn Make physical changes at home that are conducive to getting things done. Clearing a workspace or getting rid of items you no longer need or use is a good place to start.
- Aquarius Look at all sides of an issue before you comment. If you act in haste, you will regret it. Refuse to let your emotions take charge and cause you to overreact.
- Pisces Refuse to let emotions take charge. If you show someone that you are vulnerable, you can expect to be taken advantage of. Be strong and do your own thing. EUGENIA LAST
